THINGS MEN SAY: GOOD, BAD, NAUGHTY AND NICE (A TO Z)

Modern, novelty book reveals the humorous truths about dating

"...Fun, light, and most of all so true!!!"
-Janis Spindel, Serious Matchmaking Inc.

"Tracey and I must be twins living a parallel existence on opposite coasts. I found myself alternately smiling, laughing out loud and rolling my eyes at the all too familiar lines and behaviors. Gotta know when to hold and when to flee..."
-Deborrah Cooper, author of Sucka Free Love

"...The situations provoking this zany assortment of lines from the guys gives a glimpse into the life of the urban girl. [Tracey] makes real life funny."
-Maxine Snowden, author of Don't Fork the Peas!

According to author Tracey L. Williams, urban dating can be defined as the modern day battlefield of romance where hearts are either won or broken. Whether married, in a relationship, divorced, or happily single, at one time or another we've either experienced or heard it all before. How we maneuver through each situation and make it our own is what separates rookies from experienced urbanites who have "been there" and "done that".

Things Men Say (Urban Living Publishing; November 2008; $17.95) exposes the sweet and sometimes wild, urban-dating experiences into a witty tale filled with good, bad, naughty, and nice.

In a world where dating can be regarded as a "complicated" endeavor, Williams understands that dating experiences are a commonality shared by all.

According to some U.S. dating statistics:

- 40% of men are use pick-up lines and nearly 50% of women fall for them.
- 63% percent of married couples meet through friends;
- 44% of adult Americans are single;
- 40% of those singles use online dating services.
- There are 86 unmarried men for every 100 unmarried women.

Just when the stats seem to get daunting, Williams finds a way to take a serious and often tricky subject and deliver it in a fun and humorous way complete with bold graphics and illustrations. Things Men Say: Good, Bad, Naughty, and Nice (A to Z) gets you up close and personal to discover all that's you've missed, all that you experienced, or all that you have coming!

About the Author:

Tracey L. Williams is a consummate marketing professional, business coach, and visionary who enjoys colliding her professional and creative worlds, with tads of wit sprinkled throughout. Tracey balances her life by employing her natural gifts and pursuing varied passions. Her book, Things Men Say, embodies this philosophy and is truly an expression of her creativity and playful spirit. Born and raised in New York, Tracey currently lives in Washington, D.C. and classifies herself as an "urban girl impassioned with city living". Although her list keeps growing, her favorite cities include Chicago, DC, Miami, San Francisco, and of course NY.
